PASSION.IO CASE STUDY

How we ran a record Black Friday for a Passion.io client. [verify with Muddassir]

Same list. Different letters. Different times.

3x3

@muddassir

Swipe →

THE STARTING POINT

Everyone on the list was getting the same email at the same time.

Open rates looked fine. Revenue was flat.

The list was being broadcast to, not written to.

01

THREE GROUPS, NOT ONE

1. Group A. Bought in the last three months.
2. Group B. Bought six to eighteen months ago.
3. Group C. Never bought, still opens emails.
4.
5.

GROUP A. THE RECENT BUYERS

A thank-you email, twenty-four hours before anyone else.

Not a promotion. A reward for already being a customer.

Revenue from this group doubled first.

GROUP B. THE QUIET BUYERS

A specific new product that matched something they bought before.

One line. One link. No "we miss you."

GROUP C. THE NEVER-BUYERS

The cleanest offer. Four emails through the window. Rising urgency.

No clever tricks. Accept some will never buy, and write for the ones who will.

DIFFERENT GROUPS, DIFFERENT SEND TIMES

Match the send time to when each group has opened in the past.

The data was already there. We used it.

WHAT MOVED

Revenue per lead nearly doubled over the window. [verify with Muddassir]

Most of the lift came from Group A, the smallest send volume.

THE LESSON

You do not need a bigger list.

You need to read the one you already have.

NEXT STEP

Want help building this for your next launch?

Book a free call with me. Link in bio.

→ calendly.com/muddassir