CASE STUDY

How we took revenue per lead from $13 to $27.

A 90-day project at Passion.io.

THE SETUP

Passion.io helps creators build and run their own apps. Their list was large. The revenue per lead was flat at $13.

The goal was simple. Double that number without adding ad spend.

WHAT THE LIST LOOKED LIKE

On the surface, healthy. Open rates in the normal range. Active buyers every week.

Under the surface, one big group of leads had never bought anything.

MOVE 1. SPLIT THE LIST BY BEHAVIOUR

Three groups. Recent buyers. Buyers from the last twelve months who had not come back. Leads who never bought.

Each group got its own plan.

MOVE 2. BUILD A SECOND-PURCHASE OFFER

For the buyers who had already bought once, we built one offer priced for them. Not a discount on the first offer. A new offer that only made sense after the first.

It was the move that mattered most.

MOVE 3. REBUILD THE FIRST 14 DAYS

For new leads, we rebuilt the first two weeks of emails. Fewer sends. Sharper sends. One clear result in the first week.

THE RESULT

Revenue per lead went from $13 to $27 across 90 days.

Same list. Same ad spend. Two structural changes.

THE LESSON

When the number stops moving, the fix is rarely a new channel.

It is usually a second offer and a sharper first two weeks.
